Aquent

RE: Front-end Developer

Dear Hiring Manager:

This letter is to express my special interest in discussing the Front-end Developer role at Aquent. I've learned about the opportunity a couple of days ago on LinkedIn.com and found it extremely appealing. I believe that my experience and education make me a competitive candidate worthy of consideration.

I know that Aquent is a well-known staffing company, looking to fulfill the internal web team (squad) in the Staffing Technology department for three months. And I'm a results-oriented Front-End Developer ready to become a part of an agile development team, working as an empathetic communicator and collaborator with solid experience in front-end markup and styling, helping you to implement a new website design. My expert knowledge of a variety of technologies will allow me to play a crucial role in the implementation of business initiatives and support the company's mission as well.

I really love challenging tasks, so far I have several completed projects, maintaining 97% positive feedback. In my attached résumé you will find additional details of my educational and employment background for your review. I believe that the combination of my training and experience will prove to be an invaluable asset to your innovative and talented team.

I would be happy to schedule an interview to learn more about the position and explore the ways in which I can positively impact your team.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Olena Kryvonis
